Shepperton is a charming little riverside village situated about midway between Walton-on-Thames and Chertsey. There is a lock on the river at this point. Shepperton is a place of considerable antiquity– the Scepertone of Domesday Book– many British, Roman and Saxon relics having been secured from the river-bed here. The church of St. Nicholas is also of old foundation, and in the village may be found some fine old Tudor timbered cottages.
